

What's That?

A Collaborative Project with the Rasin Foundation

Clinician Consent to Participate

The Rasin Foundation is a Boston-based non-profit organization that supports a health center in Leogane, Haiti. Staffed by nurses and visiting health care providers, the clinicians occasionally encounter patients with complaints, exam findings, or laboratory testing that requires input from clinicians with more advanced training. The Rasin Foundation would be grateful if you would help our staff in Haiti by offering remote consultations when these events occur when germane to your area of training and expertise.

I, _____, am a(n) _____

I agree to offer the Rasin Foundation clinical staff in Haiti my best clinical opinion and advice regarding the patients they consult me on. I agree to offer consultation in a timely fashion as allowed. I understand the information I am provided about the patient may be somewhat limited and the information I provide the clinical staff will be based on the data available to me from the staff. I understand I will have some opportunity to dialog with the clinical staff at the health center in Haiti (linguistic support provided, if needed).

I understand that I am assuming no formal role in the care of the patient and that I have no liability for issues related to the care of the patient in question. I understand I will receive no payment of any kind for the advice and opinions I render in the care of the patients at the Rasin Foundation clinic. Additionally, I understand that I can choose which requests for assistance I answer based on my comfort with the questions and my availability; I am under no obligation to answer requests.

I agree to the terms above. I understand I may withdraw from this program at any time.
